

Thinking spring—and summer

Finally, the hallmarks of spring are visible. Crocuses, daffodils, budding fruit trees, and longer daylight hours invite us outdoors. We know summer is right around the corner, and the desire to dig out those walking shoes and head out for a walk or hike is strong. Resuming outdoor exercise is good for everyone. The benefits of sunshine and fresh air as well as the inspiration that comes from preferred sports and familiar trails are great ways to nurture one's body, mind, and spirit.

However, the commitment to a group-exercise class, strength-training regimen, and laps or aquatic classes in the pool is an important part of the formula for success when resuming or beginning outdoor adventures. The research community reminds us with the results of evidence-based studies every day that strength training and flexibility are important aspects of the equation to good health and functional fitness. Aerobic exercise alone—even with the well-known benefits of walking—will not provide the overall conditioning that prevents the onset of bone-thinning diseases, muscle loss (sarcopenia), and deconditioning.

Maintaining the discipline of a scheduled class, personal training session, or workout on strength-training equipment overcomes interruptions or demands life might impose.

As the days lengthen and the golf clubs, bike, and walking shoes beckon from the hall closet, make sure to keep your health club or exercise class regimen among your list of daily to-dos. The total health equation is a formula for success in all of the varied activities and adventures that lie ahead.
